Bard Graduate Center, New York City

When: Monday, October 26, 2015, 5:00-6:00pm

Where: University of Southern California, Taper Hall of Humanities 108

Bard Graduate Center is a graduate research institute of Bard College based in New York City and dedicated to studying the cultural history of the material world. Our faculty offer a broad exploration of history through its material traces, drawing on methodologies and approaches from art and design history, economic and cultural history, philosophy, anthropology, and archaeology, and our MA students come from diverse academic backgrounds, including art history, anthropology, English, and women’s studies.

The two-year MA program includes internship opportunities at cultural institutions all over the world as well as an international study trip. Our degree program prepares students not only for a range of professional opportunities in the museum world and beyond, but also for further research in highly competitive doctoral programs.

Fall 2016 Application Deadline: January 8, 2016

For more information, please visit bgc.bard.edu/admissions