As a JEP student, your work in the community is similar to that of a social scientist who conducts “participant-observer” research. Throughout the course of the semester, you will observe and participate in the daily activities of those you meet at your JEP site, and you will write about your experiences on a weekly basis. These JEP Reflective Questions (RQs) are designed to help you focus your observations and critically reflect on your experiences in relation to what you are learning about in your USC course.

REFLECTIVE QUESTIONS HINTS:

1. Read the questions first. Reading the question before you go to your JEP site is required in order to answer many RQs and having the questions on your mind will when at your site will help focus your observations and improve your response to all RQS.
2. Take Notes. As soon as possible after leaving your site, take a few minutes to quickly write down a few notes about your experience that day—difficult moments, things that surprised you, highlights from teaching, etc. Taking 2-3 minutes to do this each week will save you time later and will provide the examples and observations you need to write an outstanding essay.
3. Proof your work. Like any college-level writing assignment, proof your work to make sure the writing is clear, error-free, and that you answer the question at hand.
4. Read and respond to your PA’s comments. The questions are related to and build upon one other. So refer back to previous responses and to take seriously your PA’s feedback each week and respond to the feedback by following the PAs suggestions.
5. Be respectful. Show your respect by being mindful of the limits of your experience and knowledge. Avoid generalizations and psychological explanations of behavior; in other words, do not make arguments that assume you know how someone else thinks or feels or use these assumptions to explain the way people act or their circumstances.
6. Use examples. Focus on writing detailed and concrete accounts of people, social settings and conversations (including direct quotes, when possible). Never make claims without evidence or examples!

YOUR WEEKLY ASSIGNMENTS
The core parts of each Reflection Question (which you need to focus on) are highlighted in bold. Use the additional parts of the question to guide/supplement your answer. Please refer to the PA agreement you received in training for instructions regarding due dates and format requirements. Note that some weeks require longer responses and are worth more points.
ESSAY ONE - “Pre-reflection”
(1 page, 10 points, due: 2/14)
Please respond to one of the following prompts. The second set of questions is for returning volunteers only.

#1: Over the next eight-weeks you will be taking your college education outside of the walls of the University. Based on what you know about JEP and what you know about your site, what do you imagine your JEP experience will be like? Make sure to explain why you think what you think and use examples from your experiences at USC and in the community to explain yourself. Make your imagined vision of your JEP experience specific by addressing these two questions: Ideally, what would you like to learn from your experiences in JEP? When you think about JEP, what makes you the most nervous or concerned?

#2: Think back to your last experience in JEP and think about how you can take what you've learned about JEP, USC and the surrounding neighborhood, or the organization or school you worked with and improve your experience this time around. Now that you know something about how JEP works, what do you hope to learn from doing JEP again? What was the biggest obstacle you faced in your last JEP experience and how will you address that issue this time? Make sure to use clear and detailed examples from your last JEP experience to explain your reasoning.

ESSAY TWO: Initial Experience
(1.5-2 pages, 15 points, due: 2/21)
Describe the social and physical context of your JEP site. Pay close attention to the people at your site. How many are there? What are the demographic characteristics of the group (e.g., age, sex, race, ethnicity, etc.), and how do they vary by subgroup (students, teachers, staff)? Walk or look around your site and take in the physical environment; observe the size, space, decor, noise level, smell, etc. of the classroom (or meeting room), the building(s) on the site, the grounds, and the neighborhood. What is the overall feel of the site and neighborhood? How do you think the social and physical context affects the individuals who regularly spend time much of their time at the site (e.g., employees, “clients,” students)? How might the social environment influence the experiences and perspectives of the individuals with whom you are working? How might the physical environment help and/or hinder the organization you are working with from achieving its goals (e.g., teaching children, protecting domestic violence victims, etc.)?

1:1 Chats: Discuss Questions, Issues, and Concerns***********
This week you will be meeting one-on-one with your Program Assistant to talk about your experiences in JEP. In place of a full-length journal assignment this week, we ask that you take a few minutes to write down any questions, comments or concerns that you have about your JEP assignment so far. For example, what are your tasks at the site and how are you adjusting to your new role? How are you relating to the people at your site? Are you having any problems with any of the logistical aspects of your assignment (e.g., schedule, transportation, Blackboard access, etc.)? Do not submit this writing on Blackboard, rather, take it with you to your one-on-one chat with your PA so you are prepared and remember to talk about any issues that need to be addressed.
ESSAY THREE – Family Experiences
(1 page, 10 points, due: 3/7)

What have you learned so far about the families of the individuals with whom you are working? What brought them (and/or their families) to the programs offered by your JEP site and what are they hoping to gain from participating? What are their short- and long-term goals and what do they think is necessary to accomplish these goals? Are their goals and plans the same as the agency’s/site’s plans?

NOTE: Please be respectful of individuals’ privacy. If those with whom you are working have not offered personal information about their lives, do not probe for details. If you can’t answer the specific questions in this week’s assignment, focus your response on what you’ve learned in general about the children and families associated with your site, either from the staff at the site or from your USC course.

ESSAY FOUR – Families and Households
(2 pages, 20 points, due: 3/21)

In order to understand the diversity and complexity of families in your JEP site’s neighborhood, first you will need to find and analyze data on their composition.

What impact does socio-economic status and inequality have on family structures? Go to the Census Bureau website to find out more about the occupations and income levels of the community residents with whom you are working:

1. Go to www.factfinder.census.gov/
2. Click on the “street address” link in the lower left of the screen.
3. Enter the street address for your JEP site in the “address search” box on the lower left side of the screen and click “Go.” (select for “a year and program” census 2000)
4. Highlight the “Census Tract” number in the box that appears and click “Map It” to see the area you are about to see data about.
5. Click “OK.”
6. Clink on the links to see the data in tables DP-1, QT-H3 and QT-P11, along with any others that are of interest to you.

Take a look at the tables and describe the families who live in the neighborhood in which you are working. What interesting information do you find? Use what you have learned in Sociology 369 to take what you find interesting and turn it into a hypothetical research question. This research question should be both a paper you could imagine Professor Casper asking you to write about and something that you find interesting, curious, upsetting or otherwise engaging. Write out your research question and explain why you think it is an important question to ask. Explain what data inspired you ask the question and provide some context for why this is a question that needs to be asked. Finally, talk about what sort of research you would need to perform in order to answer this question and how your experiences in JEP would help you answer the question. That is, what do you need to know that is not in this data? How would you figure it out? Are there any resources from Sociology 369 that would be useful? Use at least one example of an experience you have had at JEP that provides context for the research question and/or could provide useful data for your hypothetical research.
ESSAY FIVE – Family Policy and Family Politics

(2 pages, 20 points, due: 4/4)

Ooms’ Marriage and Government debates whether the government should play a role in the promotion of marriage. Whether the government should or should not get involved in promoting marriage is a matter of opinion, yet it does actively involve itself in other issues facing the children/teens/families at your JEP site. It also regulates/guides the ways in which the site can respond to these issues and the needs of the children/teens/families. What are some of the important policies and laws that impact the issues facing the families or individuals at your JEP site (e.g., domestic violence laws, child welfare/foster care policy, educational policy, welfare reform, family planning, etc.)? How do these policies and laws regulate the ways in which your site can respond to the families’ or individuals’ needs? What issues relating to marriage and families do you think need to be addressed in US law and politics in order for the organization you are working with to be able to more effectively meet their goals? Use an example from your JEP experience to explain why you think this particular issue needs funding, greater awareness, regulation, change in the law, etc. If you think current laws and the state of political discussions serve your organization well, explain how and why you think this is good for families.

ESSAY SIX – Town and Gown: Students and Community

(1.5-2 pages, 15 points, due: 4/11/2011)

Please choose one of the two options below:

Option 1 – Your role in the community

USC’s master plan (http://www.usc.edu/community/upcmasterplan/) lays out USC’s vision for developing the area around the University Park Campus. Students are not mentioned in the majority of the plan save for the section on “community outreach:”

Throughout its 125-year history, USC has put high value on being a good neighbor—and on programs and projects that have a positive and visible impact on its neighborhoods. In his 1991 inaugural address, USC President Steven B. Sample spelled out his vision of the urban university, where traditional boundaries between university and community become blurred and permeable, and students have the opportunity to be active participants in the interchange.

As a result, USC has come together with local residents in one of the most ambitious social-outreach programs of any university in the nation. This culturally diverse, living laboratory of community collaboration reveals itself in more than 300 academic and professional programs that address educational, cultural, economic and safety issues in the local communities—and which earned USC the distinction of College of the Year 2000 from Time magazine and The Princeton Review.

Strategic Actions for a Just Economy (SAJE), a non-profit agency in the Figueroa Corridor, presents a different opinion on the role of students in the community (full article: http://bit.ly/fUd7tJ):
"Students today aren't going to be here when any of the master plan is implemented, but these people in the community - they live here, and they're raising their kids here, and they want to retire here."

The UPC Master Plan is a general outline for redevelopment that would provide thousands of new beds in housing complexes, construct new academic buildings and lure high-end retailers and restaurants over the next two decades.

[SAJE staff] and others want to see a commitment to building affordable housing and funding real community improvement alongside plans for expansion and a promise that new retailers will serve both the school and the community.

Consider the contrasting perspectives above as you answer the following questions. Do you think your participation in a program like JEP serves USC’s greater goals? If so, be specific about how these goals are served. If not, be specific about why not. Next, do you think USC's goals serve the community? Again, make sure to explain why you think what you think. Finally, based on your experiences in JEP, what roles and responsibilities do you think USC students should have as residents of the neighborhood and/or as students of the University? Take a look back at the essays you have written (make sure to use Blackboard, so you can see your PA's comments), and think about what you have learned over the past few weeks. Use any experiences you have had at your JEP site and in the community (with JEP or in any other capacity) that have changed your understanding of your role as a college student and as a resident of this neighborhood and city in your answer. (If you live outside of the university community, reflect generally on the roles and responsibilities you think that college students do have and should have to their city and neighborhoods in which a university resides.) (If you have not had any experiences that have shifted your thinking about the role and responsibilities of University students in regards to any of these issues, explain why you think you have never had any such experience.)

If you've participated in JEP before: you may also include your thoughts on how your current JEP assignment differs, complements or reinforces what you learned from your previous JEP experience(s).

Option 2 - Benefits of Service-Learning for Students

In addition to potentially providing beneficial services for the communities in which it is implemented, service-learning is also credited with numerous benefits for the participating students. In particular:

- Young people gain access to the range of supports and opportunities (or developmental assets) they need to grow up healthy, caring, and responsible. One study of youth civic activism found that these settings had particular strength in cultivating youth and community involvement (Lewis-Charp et al., 2003).
- Increased sense of self-efficacy as young people learn that they can impact real social challenges, problems, and needs.
- Higher academic achievement and interest in furthering their education.
- Enhanced problem-solving skills, ability to work in teams, and planning abilities.
- Enhanced civic engagement attitudes, skills and behaviors. Many leaders in public service today speak about how they were nurtured, inspired, and shaped in early experiences in community service or volunteering.
Consider these benefits and reflect on the various ways in which your JEP experience has impacted you this semester. Based on your personal experience, do you believe that the above-mentioned benefits can come from participating in a service-learning program? Which outcomes seem most likely for service-learning students? Which seem least likely? Are there other benefits that you have experienced that are not listed above? In answering these questions, make sure to explain your reasoning and use specific examples from your service-learning assignment and your course.

ESSAY SEVEN – Final Reflections
(3 pages, 25 points, due: 4/20/2011)
Take a look back at the essays you have written (make sure to use Blackboard, so you can see your PA's comments), and think about what you have learned over the past few weeks. As noted in the assignment for Essay #6 (Option 2), one of the benefits of service-learning for participating students is “higher academic achievement.” For this final essay, we want you to focus on this particular outcome vis a vis your JEP assignment. First, consider the premise itself: how does participating in a service-learning program lead to higher academic achievement? When does it fail to do so? Do students’ outcomes vary by the subject matter of the course? Or do they vary by their experiences in the community? Describe what you think are the most important factors in a service-learning assignment that ensure “higher academic achievement” for university students.

Next, think about your JEP experiences in the context of your USC course: What is the most significant “academic” outcome of your JEP assignment? How has JEP affected your understanding of the course content? Why do you think your professor is giving academic credit for JEP? What are his or her goals for you? In answering these questions, make sure to use specific examples from your course. Think broadly about the relationship between JEP and your course. Even if you believe there is no direct connection, consider how you could apply a course concept to help better understand or explain something you encounter in your JEP experience. You might focus on detailing a specific learning outcome (e.g., describing a particular theory and how it came to life through your experiences, or how teaching helped you to understand a particular course concept). Alternatively, you might reflect on how your experiences in JEP shed light on material you have learned in other courses at USC.

The goal of this assignment is for you to think critically about the academic outcomes of service-learning and describe what you learned from your experience. If you are struggling to make the connection, as an alternative, explain, in detail, how you think the course or JEP could be redesigned to foster a more meaningful connection between your course and a service-learning experience in the community.
