This seminar examines thinking about the environment in French thought. In addition to discussing the ideas of major theorists like Bruno Latour and Michel Serres, we also study ecological thought in art, urban planning, science, and popular culture. While the emphasis is on the modern and contemporary period, we aim at exploring some of the roots of ecological thought in earlier literature and film.

The class is taught in English.