The Future of French and Francophone Studies

This colloquium series brings together an international group of scholars doing provocative new work on Francophone literature and culture. We aim to stimulate reflection on the place of French and the Francophone in contemporary academic contexts. Where is the discipline of French and Francophone studies headed? What transformations has it undergone? What might it mean to envision collectively a future for our field?