In this panel, renowned USC scholars Professors Saori Katada (IR/Political Science), David Kang (Korean Studies Institute), and Daniel Lynch (IR/Political Science) address the following questions: What are the implications of the Transpacific Partnership (TPP) for the 12 negotiating countries, and for others that are not currently included in the TPP, such as China and Korea? To what extent does the TPP play a role in President Barack Obama’s “Pacific Pivot” towards Asia, and would the TPP incur military and strategic consequences? What impact does the TPP have on the existing and emerging regional economic institutions such as APEC and RCEP?

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 5TH, 2014
12-2 PM • 445 KAPIELIAN HALL • UNIVERSITY PARK CAMPUS
CO-SPONSORED BY AMERICAN STUDIES & ETHNICITY (ASE) & HISTORY
LIGHT LUNCH PROVIDED: RSVP TO CBAIK@USC.EDU