Learn about the history of the Mexican American Experience in the criminal justice system. This 60 minute film details the 1954 US Supreme Court Case Hernandez v. Texas, which challenged exclusionary practices that kept Latinos off of juries. See how discrimination plays a role in the criminal justice system and how this case sought to change it. The film also encourages us to think critically about the ways in which meanings of race are socially constructed.

Date: Thursday November 14
Time: 3:30–5:00pm
Where: HSH 201

Watch and join a discussion with Sociology professors
Elaine Bell Kaplan and Karen Sternheimer

USC Sociology
Hazel & Stanley Hall 314
851 Downey Way
Phone: 213-740-3533
E-mail: soci@dornsife.usc.edu
Web: http://dornsife.usc.edu/soci/
Twitter: @USC_Soci