The Pre-Modern Mediterranean Seminar of USC-Huntington Early Modern Studies Institute invites you to participate in its next seminar

JOSEPH G. MANNING
YALE UNIVERSITY

CLIMATE CHANGE, SOCIAL UNREST AND THE ECONOMY IN Hellenistic Egypt: GLOBAL IMPLICATIONS?

FRIDAY OCTOBER 23, 2–4 PM

USC CAMPUS
LEAVEY LIBRARY (LVL 17)

map with Public parking @ http://web-app.usc.edu/maps/
Refreshments will be served

For further information about this event, contact Christelle Fischer-Bovet (fischerb@usc.edu).
For general information about the seminar, go to http://dornsife.usc.edu/emsi/pre-modern-mediterranean/

If you want to join the mailing list of the Early Modern Studies Institute, Please email: emsi@usc.edu.

Manning specializes in Hellenistic history with particular focus on the legal and economic history of Ptolemaic Egypt. His interests lie in governance, reforms of the state, legal institutions, formation of markets, and the impact of new economic institutions (coinage, banking) on traditional socio-economic patterns in the ancient world. He is also deeply concerned with Papyrology, the interpretation of ancient sources, and bringing to bear the historical social sciences, particularly Economic Sociology and economic and legal theory, to ancient history.