“Measurement: Architecture and the Search for Constancy in Seventeenth-Century France”

Friday, November 30, 2018
12noon to 2:00pm
DML 241

Join us for a discussion of a work-in-progress from Jason Nguyen’s book project, Architecture in the Making: The Art of Building in the Age of Absolutism. It examines how the theorization of building practice in seventeenth-century France intersected with the period’s mechanical philosophy of nature as well as the politics of absolutism.

Complete the RSVP form by 11/28 to receive the pre-circulated readings.

The USC Society of Fellows in the Humanities is sponsored by the USC Office of the Provost and the USC Office of the Dean of Dornsife College of Letters, Arts, and Sciences. We thank the Sidney Harman Academy of Polymathic Study for hosting this event.
