Dr. Andrea Mammone is an historian of modern Europe, a lecturer at Royal Holloway of the University of London. His book on Transnational Neofascism in France and Italy has recently been published by Cambridge University Press, and he is the author of numerous other articles and chapters on the subject of European far-right politics. Mammone is also a prominent media commenter on contemporary European nationalist politics, from the BBC and Guardian to Voice of America and The New York Times. Among other projects, Mammone is also working on a personal and political history of his native Calabria.