This new workshop will focus on how to improve students’ speaking in the Interpersonal and Presentational modes of communication for the AP French Language and Culture Course. Using examples from different course themes, and recommended contexts, it will examine how to provide practical strategies and plan meaningful learning experiences to develop students’ oral skills, with an emphasis on promoting spontaneity, enhancing confidence and producing quality language. The session will be run in French and English.

For RSVP, contact the Francophone Research & Resource Center: frc@usc.edu. For more information, please go to https://dornsife.usc.edu/francophone-center/

This workshop is organized with the support of the USC Libraries and the Cultural Services of the French Embassy to the United States of America.

Anneli McLachlan is an experienced educator, an inspiring course presenter and a prolific foreign language author for Pearson.

Anneli consults at national level in the U.K. for the Department of Education, the National Center for Languages, the BBC, Channel 4, the British Council and local education authorities.