Event Wrap: EASC & CIS Open House

Last Tuesday, USC East Asian Studies Center (EASC) and Center for International Studies (CIS) hosted an Open House to welcome faculty, students, staff and community members to our new offices on Trousdale Parkway and 34th Street! For more information about our Centers and upcoming events, please see the EASC and CIS websites. PHOTOS

EASC Global East Asia China Reunion Dinner

On Thursday, the 2016 EASC Global East Asia (GEA) China scholars joined Professor Brett Sheehan and EASC staff for a reunion dinner in Parkside Arts & Humanities Residential College. Like their counterparts in Japan, the GEA China scholars shared stories about their favorite moments while on the program such as learning to haggle at a fake goods mall in Shanghai, exploring a remote temple near Hebi, seeing the flag rise at Tiananmen and climbing the Great Wall. They also reminisced about their extracurricular adventures and meals together, and greatly appreciated the Beijing Normal students who assisted them in their research and having the unique opportunity to travel to lesser-known inland cities. Tomorrow: Knocking Down the Gates of Hell A Discussion with Andrew Morris

Andrew Morris, Professor of History at California Polytechnic State University, San Luis Obispo and author of Marrow of the Nation: A History of Sport and Physical Culture in Republican China (University of California Press, 2004), will give a lecture on the defection of Squadron Commander Fan Yuanyan 范園焱, one of the eighteen prominent defectors from China during the period between 1960 and 1989. This event is co-sponsored by USC East Asian Studies Center, U.S.-China Institute, and Department of History.
