2014 Summer Graduate Student Fellows
EASC supports graduate students through a number of funding opportunities made possible by federal, foundation and donor support. In summer 2014 alone, we offered three different types of fellowships to 29 graduate students from a wide variety of departments and schools at USC. We are committed to supporting a breadth of research and disciplines in order to build a stronger East Asian studies community across the university. This Tumblr article details some of the people and projects that we funded over the summer.

Event Wrap: Korean Film Festival
Two hot summer days and hundreds of attendees later, the 2014 KSI/SCA Korean Film Festival ended a success! Over 250 students, faculty, and film enthusiasts attended the weekend film festival. Many attendees raved about the film selections and expressed how much they enjoyed the curation of films. These films counter stereotypical representations by allowing audiences to see vibrant depictions of the lives of North Koreans and the possibility of change in North Korea.

The panel discussion, moderated by Professor David Kang, featured the directors of “Comrade Kim Goes Flying,” Nicholas Bonner and Anja Daelemans, USC professor Youngmin Choe, and UCSB professor Suk-Young Kim. Almost 200 people were in attendance during the panel, which was also filmed for the KSI You Tube channel and will be available for viewing in a few weeks.
