The 36th North American Conference on Chinese Linguistics

Deadline: November 15

Pomona College is organizing the 36th North American Conference on Chinese Linguistics (NACCL). For the upcoming NACCL, the conference goal is to establish a strong connection between linguistics and SLA. Therefore, the chosen theme is "Chinese Linguistics and Instructed Second Language Acquisition." Recent years have seen a growing trend of empirical studies demonstrating how teaching and learning Chinese as a second language (CSL) benefit from the integration of Chinese linguistics and second language acquisition (SLA). NACCL-36 aims to provide a venue for linguistic researchers and language educators to explore how Chinese linguistic theories inform the acquisition of CSL and how SLA provides implications for applying linguistic theories in CSL pedagogy. Submissions of proposals that highlight the interdisciplinary nature of CSL learning and teaching are also welcome. Learn More >
