

RICOCHET // NEW RELEASE // SPRING 2020

Perfect-bound | 37 pages, 5" x 7" | Poetry | $10 | ISBN 978-1-938900-34-1

CAITLIN SCARANO

The Hatchet and the Hammer

PRAISE:

“Doesn’t sickness require a period of wellness / to be measured against?” Essential questions surrounding the body and sickness are the obsession of Caitlin Scarano’s speaker in this book, which is part-prose, part-poem, and wholly concerned with what circumstances of life are survivable. In a book-length narrative, hybridity becomes a thing of the self, of the world, of relationships, of the body living with disease. Rife with research, these conflicts are further demonstrated by fractured language and image on each page. But, ‘there is always a line’: what survives and what doesn’t. This book is a triumph of language and its uses. Of the ways experience can be translated. It pulls the reader into its grief chorus through the wonder of those living with sickness, through the conditions that make our lives (im)possible.”

– Chelsea Dingman

“In a deeply felt and carefully braided mix of personal history, poetic reference, and psychological research, The Hatchet and the Hammer is an intensely lyrical examination of violence—violence as old as the hills, and violence as new as the pharmaceuticals taken to counteract it. The work here is fearless, disturbing, haunting, honest. And, ultimately, redemptive. Scarano is a poet worthy of our full attention.”

– Daryl Farmer

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Caitlin Scarano is a writer based in the North Cascades. She holds a PhD in English from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and an MFA in Poetry from the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Her debut collection of poems, Do Not Bring Him Water, was released in Fall 2017 by Write Bloody. Her work has appeared in Granta, Best New Poets, Best Small Fictions, Carve, and Colorado Review. She teaches classes at the Loft Literary Center (online) and at and Hugo House (in-person). You can find her at caitlinscarano.com

ricochet

RICOCHET EDITIONS publishes poetry, fiction, and nonfiction, and is associated with the University of Southern California’s PhD in Literature & Creative Writing Program. For more information, visit <http://ricocheteditions.com>.