

School of Religion

DOCTORAL PROGRAM

USC's doctoral program in Religion offers instruction in methods and theories for the study of diverse religions, as well as specialized training in three areas of study:

- Asia Pacific Religions
- Christian Studies
- Global Islam

In addition to instruction within the School of Religion, we promote interdisciplinary study in related fields. Students may also take advantage of our faculty's participation in the many research centers and institutes at USC, which sponsor lectures, seminars, and fellowships: dornsife.usc.edu/religion/research-centers/.

We support all of our doctoral students with five-year funding packages. Students in our program gain professional training and mentoring aimed at employment as well as the cultivation of scholarly credentials.

Our hometown of Los Angeles offers an ideal setting for the study of religious life. L.A. is the most religiously diverse city in the world and features a splendid variety of museums, archives, and specialized libraries with resources for the study of multiple faith traditions.

USCDornsife

Dana and David Dornsife
College of Letters, Arts and Sciences

For more information please visit dornsife.usc.edu/religion/prospective-graduates/
You are also welcome to contact our Director of Graduate Studies, Prof. David Albertson (dalberts@usc.edu)